Spread Awareness, Not Germs

During the COVID 19, it's vital that staff and visitors are educated on ways to avoid the CORONA virus. This can be accomplished by promoting the importance of hygienic practices, such as use of masks, hand washing avoid handshakes, not to touch the face frequently. Additional efforts that can prove effective include displaying signs that promote CORONA safety throughout the facility, dry disinfection chambers at main gate and encouraging workers to stay home when sick.

During the flu season, keeping high-traffic environments clean can feel like an impossible task. Nevertheless, facility managers and cleaning staff must be prepared and focused on protecting its workers and visitors from exposure to harmful germs and illnesses.

At the end of the day, the importance of implementing an effective disinfecting and sanitizing process during COVID 19 season cannot be overstated. However, by identifying hot spots for the spread of microbes and treating them with the appropriate products, a healthier environment can easily be achieved.
